GRIZZLIES' RON MOORE LISTED TWICE ON FINAL NCAA BASKETBALL STATS

MISSOULA----

Ron Moore, 6-4 junior guard for the 1967-68 University of Montana basketball team who was injured in the 13th game of the season, still managed to be mentioned twice in the final National Collegiate Athletic Association cage statistics just released.

Moore's 20 conversions out of 23 free throw attempts in a game with Gonzaga University in Missoula Jan. 12 rated as the second best individual free throw effort for a single game in the nation last season.

The performance, which helped Moore to a 36-point scoring output in the game, tied him for second with Cal Murphy of Niagara University, who hit 20 of 23 against Syracuse last season. The best was by Quick of Xavier, who tallied on 22 of 24 against Marquette.

Moore was also listed as having the 79th best scoring average in the nation with 19.8 per game. Despite the fact that he played in only 13 games, Moore was selected for the All Big Sky Conference second team. He saw action in only six league games, but scored 36 points in two of them.

In other NCAA stats, though not quite as impressive, the Grizzlies ranked ninth in the nation in personal fouls committed by a team with 22.2 per game. The leader was Centenary College of Louisiana with 24.2.
